Dr. T. Kue Young, MD, FRCPC, DPhil, FCAHS, CM, has played a pivotal role in the development of Indigenous & northern health research in Canada & internationally, and has worked to improve and promote the health & well-being of Indigenous peoples in many roles, including as medical director of U of T's Sioux Lookout Project.

This Group's Learning program meets the certification criteria of the College of Family Physicians of Canada and has been certified by the Continuing Education and Professional Development Office at the Northern Ontario School of Medicine for up to 1.0 Mainpro+ credits.

NOHHMG

The Northern Ontario History of Health and Medicine Group links students, faculty, researchers, practitioners, staff and interested individuals from across the North and beyond from a range of disciplines/professions. It is open to the public.

Learning Objectives: Demonstrate knowledge of the history of Indigenous people's interactions with western health care. Discuss research methods, sources & results related to the history of the Indigenous people's interactions with western health care. Discuss and develop a wider critical perspective on the history of Indigenous people's interactions with western health care that can help inform their perspectives on issues related to practice & relevant public debates.
